Bosnia Strains Revive U.S.-Russia Suspicions Is Moscow Good Guy or the Bad Guy?

By Daniel Williams

Washington Part Service
WASHINGTON — Beyond the fate of Sarajevo, the current international maneuvers over Bosnia may decide whether the Balkans remain an arena of cooperation between Washington and Moscow or a stage of revived confrontation between the two former Cold War adversaries.

President Boris N. Yeltsin's rejection of the NATO ultimatum to the Serbs and Washington's reserve in welcoming Russian peace-making moves are symptoms of maderlying suspicion infecting the relationship.

"We just don't know whether they are good guys or bad guys," an administration official said of the Russians. There's no question that when one deals with the Russians in the Balkans, you have to watch your back."

In an effort to placate the Russians, President Bill Clinton will telephone Mr. Yeltsin before any bombing takes place, a senior U.S. official said Saturday.

Since the Gulf war, Russian-American relations have been harmonious on a number of foreign policy issues, including Bosnia, on which consultations have been close. But in recent months, strains have developed around the issues that grate on Russia's growing nationalist feelings: NATO expansion eastward, which was delayed in part to ease Russian fears; the West's concerns about Russian intervention in former Soviet states, and perceptions in Moscow of Russian submission to U.S. foreign policy objectives.

In Bosnia, the two sides have been unable to reconcile fundamentally different views of

In the phone conversation, Mr. Yeltsin told Mr. Clinton of Russian opposition but pledged to press the Serbs to comply with NATO's demands. In return, he asked Mr. Clinton to press the Muslims to reach a negotiated settlement that closely resembled one on the table that would keep many Serbian war gains intact.

Mr. Clinton resisted the request to press the Muslims, insisting that they were the victims. But he did repeat a pledge to get more closely involved in pending peace talks. In Mr. Yeltsin's letter, he opposed the NATO bomb threat and indicated that its

Threat of NATO Air Strikes Eases; Clinton 'Hopeful' on Serb Pullout

By Alan Cowell New York Times Service

AVIANO AIR BASE, Italy - The threat of immediate NATO air strikes around Sarajevo appeared to diminish on Sunday night as de-tense ministers from the United States and other allied nations monitored the Bosnian Serbian response to an ultimatum to remove heavy

A senior American official said in Washington that no decision had been made on enforcing the ultimatum. There has been "no decision to bomb, no decision not to bomb," he said.

The official said President Bill Clinton had spoken by telephone with President Boris N. Yeltsin of Russia on Sunday afternoon and had told him that he was encouraged by Serbian efforts to comply with the ultimatum but that "no decision on air strikes was yet taken." In Paris, President François Mitterrand estimated that Bosnian Serbs had withdrawn or handed over to UN peacekeepers 90 percent of their artillery around the Bosnian capital and added that "the reason" for possible air strikes

'appears to have vanished."
Yasushi Akashi, the United Nations' senior civilian in former Yugoslavia, said heavy snow in recent days and icy roads meant that "not all weapons" left in the exclusion zone around Sarajevo would be removed by the deadline. But the U.S. desense secretary. William J. Perry, said UN forces had reported that they were able to travel all over the 20-kilometer (12-"If artillery pieces cannot be disabled, they are able to put a guard over it." Mr. Perry said.

day that he was encouraged by reports that the Serbs were moving weapons away from Sarajevo. Asked whether he was hopeful that air strikes would not have to be carried out, the president replied. "I'm hopeful because of what

see happening."
The United Nations said in Zagreb, the Croatian capital, that the withdrawal appeared to be proceeding satisfactorily hours before the 2400 GMT expiration of the ultimatum

Lieutenant General Sir Michael Rose, the UN commander in Sarajevo, refused to say whether he would recommend air strikes if Serbian guns remained in place unguarded past the deadline. But the BBC reported from the besieged city that he has decided Serbian forces had adequately complied, although the report did not directly quote him.

General Rose said that 41 positions at which Bosnian Serb heavy arms were positioned had been identified, and that 32 of them had been inspected by UN forces. Of the 32, 23 were empty and nine were occupied, he said. Of the nine, five were already under UN control, and the other four were in the process of being taken under UN control, he added.

contract with Deutsche Grammophon and a schedule of performances that takes him reassuringly deep into 1998, Mr. Terfel has a future that does not lack for certainty, fame or income. But in hindsight anyway, it never has.

"He is one of the greatest tal-ents of the last 15 or 20 years," says Sir Georg Solti. The conductor sets the date for Mr. Terfel's "bursting onto the scene" as 1989, when at age 24 he "won" the Cardiff Singer of the World Competi-

Perhaps the greatest testament to success is its ability to wipe away the messy imperfections of history. In fact, in that 1989 competition Mr. Terfel managed second place, a fact that few can now

Many insist that the secondplace finish guaranteed his ultimate success. "It would have been worse if he had won," said Matthew Epstein, the general director of the Welsh National Opera. The pressures of winning are just too great.

As it was, Mr. Terfel's showing got him a contract with the Welsh National Opera. As he puts it, that meant "three steps up the ladder" rather than a sudden disorienting rocket to the top.

For a budding opera singer, pacing is everything. Patience and the strength to say "no" to impresarios and conductors desperate to sign up the latest phenomenon are all too rare. But a voice too quickly shoved onto the stage in heroic Wagnerian roles can all too often be a voice forever ruined.

A few years ago, Mr. Terfel recalls, he tentatively accepted one of those roles. Shortly afterward he found himself sitting with mounting horror through a performance of Wagner's "Flying Dutchman '

"I heard a Wagnerian orchestra for the first time and realized they are loud, ver-r-ry loud," he said. The next day he called up and

At 28, he intends to husband his talent carefully for the next few years. In that wish he has plenty of support. "I hope he will go on singing Mozart for a while," said Rudolf Piernay, Mr. Terfel's teacher for the last decade. "It is strenuous enough."

It is also a course attractive ough for someone learning not only how ultimately to sing heroic roles but also how to live on a heroic scale. Mr. Terfel admits he likes the trappings of success. His career has offered opportunities aplenty to survey the gilded landscape up close. In January he came away from three weeks of performing in Offenbach's "Tales Hoffmann" with Placido Domingo, fascinated anew by the wages of megastardom. "In Vienna, everywhere Domingo went, he did not have to pay the bill," Mr. Terfel said with enthusiasm.

Even the seeming drudgery of megastardom strikes a positive chord. Two years ago, after finishing a performance of Saintens's "Samson and Delilah" in Spain at 3 A.M., Mr. Terfel stood by dumbfounded as José Carreras patiently spent hours signing autographs. "If the superstars do things like that, they must really enjoy it," he reasoned.

As a bass baritone in a world where fame has a way of favoring tenors - from Enrico Caruso to Luciano Pavarotti - Mr. Terfel will, even at the peak of his career, have to foot some of his own restaurant bills. Still, ever the student of the good life to come, he happily asks waiters to soak labels off the pricey bottles of wine served gratis to his renowned colleagues. At home he carefully inserts those labels into his wine book and his

A national population conference in 1981 set a target of 1.2 billion for the year 2000. Experts predict that, with a maintenance of China's rigid family planning that aims at one child per family, the population will peak at about 1.56 billion in the year 2044.

President Clinton speaking after an address in Washington in which he reaffirmed U.S. commitment to NATO's ultimatum.

Clintons to Pay Whitewater Legal Fees

WASHINGTON - When President Bill Clinton complained the other day that the special investigation of his Whitewater land investment "is going to cost the taxpayers millions of dollars," he did not mention that it will most likely cost him a lot as well. The White House has said the Clintons are footing their own bills for the services of David Kendall of Washington's Williams & Connolly law firm to represent them in the inquiry undertaken by Robert B. Fiske Jr., the special counsel. The probe, which could take a year to 18 months, focuses on the Whitewater investment and the first couple's ties to a failed savings and loan owned by their business partners. James and Susan McDougal.

Concerns that the Clintons were using White House lawyers to aurale personal matters had prompted three Republican members of the House appropriations subcommittee that funds the White House to seek assurances that no public funds were being used. Bernard W. Nussbaum, a White House counsel, replied in a Feb.

10 letter that his office and White House staff had responded to Whitewater queries from Congress and reporters. But he said no public funds were being used to pay Mr. Kendall and "no White House staff members are acting as lawyers for the president and first lady where there is no official nexus."

A White House official said this meant, basically, that Mr. Kendall would handle inquiries from Mr. Fiske while White House lawyers would deal with issues such as Republican requests for congressional hearings.

The Clintons and Mr. Kendall have not mentioned his fee, but defense lawyers say $300 to $400 an hour is typical for a partner at a top firm. Mr. Kendali could give the Clintons a discount of sorts, offering to represent them in the investigation for a set fee, as some other defense lawyers do.

The camp, modeled on the Civilian Conservation Corps of the 1930s, is the first of what White House officials envision as "last. chance" detention centers on federal lands where felons under the age of 18 will work on environmental cleanup projects while provid-ing low-cost labor for the National Park Service. Under a Senate resolution passed in November, the Youth Environmental Service camps will be administered jointly by the Justice and Interior departments. Other YES camps are being planned in Utah and at the National Arboretum in Washington, while the Department of Agriculture is looking at setting up similar camps in national forests in Oregon, North Carolina and Indiana.

The Florida camp, based at the site of an abandoned sawmill, will be home to as many as 20 young offenders convicted of crimes such as murder, rape and violent robbery. Under the direction of counselors rather than guards, they will spend up to a year clearing trails and building boardwalks. They also will receive counseling and vocation-

Philadelphia Vote invalidated for Fraud

PHILADELPHIA — Saying Philadelphia's diction system had collapsed under the "massive scheme" of a Democratic candidate to steal a state Senate election in November, a federal judge has taken the rare step of invalidating the election and has ordered the seat filled by the Republican candidate.

The action did for the Republicans what the election had not: It enabled them to regain control of the state Senate, which they lost two years ago.

Judge Clarence C. Newcomer of U.S. District Court ruled that the Indge Clarence C. Newcomer of U.S. District Court ruled that the Democratic candidate, William G. Stinson, had stolen the election from Bruce S. Marks in North Philadelphia's 2d Senatorial District through an elaborate fraud in which hundreds of residents were encouraged to vote by absentee ballot even though they had no legal reason, such as a physical disability or a scheduled trip outside the city, to do so.

In many instances, according to Republicans who testified at a four-day hearing last week, Democratic campaign workers forged dozens of names on absentee ballots of people who were kving in Puerto Rico, serving time in prison and, in one case, had been dead for some time.

"Substantial evidence was presented establishing massive absen-tee ballot fraud, deception, intimidation, harassment and forgery," Judge Newcomer wrote in his decision.

By Richard L. Berke

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The Republican bumper stickers that proliferated after the 1992 election read: "Don't Blame Me. I Voted for Bush." The Democrats have finally come up with a rejoinder:
"Thank Me ... I Voted Clinton-Gore!"

The market for these newly minted red, white and blue stickers may be bigger than once thought. For all of President Bill Clinton's troubles, for all the conflicting ideological messages and for all the flaws in the Democratic political operation, for all the noise from Senator Bob Dole, the language from the White House seems to be catching on. It is meant to hold on to the liberal camp while building a bridge to more centrist terrain.

There has been a small yet significant movement of people to the Democratic fold. It began even before the 1992 election and accelerated throughout Mr. Clinton's first year in office.

For the first time since 1976, the Republican Party is no longer gaining at the expense of the Democrats. The nation's basic partisanship — the degree to which people think of themselves as Democrats, Republicans or independents — remains closely balanced But Democrats have widened their advantage in partisan loyalty to eight percentage points over Republicans, twice what it was five years ago. The shift comes equally from people who identify themselves as Republicans and independents, ac-

"They're getting credit for going back to the center," said Kevin Phillips, a Republican analyst who predicted years in advance the realignment of the old Democratic South to the Republican Party. "It is significant." he said, "because if you broke out issues which the Democrats made the most gains

NEWS ANALYSIS

- you'd get crime and welfare reform. That gives them a booster shot. That's also bad news for the Republicans.

Yet Mr. Phillips asserted that the movement should not be overemphasized because there is ac suggestion that "the Democrats are establishing anything that's got any depth."

Indeed, the trend hardly portends a major party realignment. The biggest question is still where the 19 million people who voted for Ross Perot in 1992 will end up in this year's midterm elections and in the 1996 presidential race.

But the Democrats' gains are not simply from fallen-away members who were drawn back to the fold in the afterglow of Mr. Clinton's election to the White House, and they suggest that the party has the potential to win over a significant proportion of independents.

The possibilities among younger voters are striking. For the first time since 1984, more Americans in the 18-to-29 age group identify themselves as Demo-

This is important because the loyalties of younger witers often stick with them for life, and the young tend to reflect the way political forces are moving.

Although the position of political parties has declines with the edvent of television in recent decades, party loyalty is still important. It gives the dominant party a starting advantage in an election year. And polls on voter loyalty are even more reliable indicators of public sentiment than voterregistration figures, which are incomplete and often biased toward the dominant party in any local juris-

Martin P. Wattenberg, a political scientist at the University of California at Irvine, said the pattern favoring Democrats was "really reactive to the president's overall approval and the economy."

What is more significant, he said, is what the numbers say about Republicans. "The fact that some of the gains have recoded is another indicator that the Democrats are going to be a majority party in the Congress and the state legislatures well into the list century," he said. "The Republicans are

The Republicans, of course, are furious, Mr. Clinton is stealing their best lines on the biggest issues of the day, from crime to welfare reform, (He even cited an old health care proposal of Richard Nixon in his State of the Union message last month.) The public, poils show, barely distinguishes the parties in their ability to reduce the budget deficit or curb crime. Mr. Perot in 1992, fears that Democrats could be gaining an edge in winning over the Perot voters. Watching Mr. Clinton deliver the State of the Union message, he said, "sent a shiver down my spine — no one's hearing what the Republicans are saying. The Democrats control the White House, the Congress, the bully pulpit."

Even if the Democrats can sustain and build on their gains, a return to the party's dominance of two decades ago is difficult to imagine. In 1976, as the country was reeling from Watergate and Jimmy Carter was elected president, 40 percent identified themselves as Democrats and 20 percent as Republicans. But the edge diminished in the years of the Reagan administration as the Republicans absorbed supporters of George C. Wallace and the right-leaning "Reagan Democrats."

Had the Republicans been able to re-elect George Bush, the stage might finally have been set for them to overtake the Democrats in partisan allegiance. Instead, Mr. Clinton fractured the Republican coali-tion, with considerable help from Mr. Bush, who could not keep up the momentum of the Reagan years, and from Mr. Perot.

Al From, president of the Democratic Leadership Council, a centrist organization from which Mr. Clinton developed many of his campaign positions, envisions a grand era of Democratic dominance that leaves little room for the liberals who are battling for a piece of the Clinton agenda.

U.S. Aides Propose Returning To Unesco

By Steven Greenhouse

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The U.S. State Department has recommended to President Bill Clinton that the United States rejoin the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Under the Reagan administra-tion, the United States withdrew from the Paris-based Unesco 10 years ago on the grounds that it was wasting money and was hostile to free enterprise and a free press.

in making the recommendation, the State Department has advised waiting until late 1995 at the earliest, and more likely until 1997, saying there is no money in the 1995 budget, and perhaps not the next year's, to cover the $65 million in

The White House has failed to act on the recommendation for more than four months, officials said, because it is abort of cash and because it fears that conservative groups will vigorously oppose any decision to rejoin.

An interagency working group, seaded by the State Department called for rejoining after concluding that Unesco was now managed much more efficiently and had become less ideological.

In addition, the working group said Unesco was now working on many activities that Washington enthusiastically supports: a global literacy project, special education programs for women and girls, projects supporting freedom of the press, and education programs on the environment and on fighting

If the United States decides to rejoin, that will close a chapter on the Cold War fights between Washington and Moscow in which American officials worried that Soviet-backed ideologues had too much sway over powerful international organizations.

Since becoming secretary-general of Unesco in 1988, Federico Mayor Zaragoza of Spain, has hoped to woo back the United States. He has worked to make the organization's programs more practical and less political and to cut (at from the budget. He has slashed Unesco's payroll to 2,200 workers from slightly more than

Except for a small fraction that has found support abroad, the intellectual elite of the Soviet Union - scientists, professors and writers feels increasingly forsaken and alienated.

Optimists justify the negative factors as an unattractive but necessary process of "primary capital accumulation." But little of that capital has stayed in Russia: the government estimates that $25 billion has gone in the last two years to Switzerland, Austria, Cyprus, North America and other distant

Life expectancy, low in the old Soviet Union, has sunk further with deteriorating health care. Finally, the reformers tried to choke socialism into submission by clamping controls on credits and money printing.

The reformers breached the defenses, but then stalled. Within several months the political opposition hardened. Military and industrial lobbies, backed by parliament and the Central Bank, forced the reformers to fight a rear-guard battle against inflation instead of moving on structural re-forms. None of the internal or foreign investment that might have generated progress materialized.

The resignations of Mr. Gaidar and the finance minister, Boris G. Fyodorov, concluded the first phase of Russian reform, Mr. Chernomyrdin vowed that reform would continue, but what he meant cemed more a neo-Soviet reform from on high than the withdrawal

But there are signs that Jews in the Diaspora already think Israel's survival is no longer as threatened as it once was. Israeli military leaders acknowledge that Israel faces fewer threats to its existence today than at almost any time in its history. As a result, Jews abroad are nifting focus to the problems of assimilation, for example, and to a new interest in the history and meaning of the Holocaust.

Even as Israel's leaders express hope for a new era of peace and prosperity, however, they are not giving up cash from abroad. This includes not only the $3 billion in annual U.S. foreign aid, but also $2 billion a year in private donations to support social, educational, cultural, political and civic institu-

The latest debate over this largess was opened by Deputy Foreign Minister Yossi Beilin, a leftist who was an architect of the agreement with the Palestinians. Speaking to the Women's International Zionist Organization, Mr. Beilin said money from abroad might be better spent on Jewish education in the donor's country and to help bring teenagers to Israel for visits.

Mandela Says Rival Is to Blame For Deaths

JOHANNESBURG - Nelson Mandela on Sunday implicitly blamed his main black rival. Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, for a massacre of young African National Congress election workers.

Mr. Mandela, the ANC leader, accused the head of the Zulu-based Inkatha Freedom Party of fanning violence with his opposition to the country's first all-race election. Attackers used antomatic wear ons and knives on Saturday to kill 15 ANC supporters — 13 of them teenagers — preparing for a voter education program in a Natal village 500 kilometers (300 miles) southeast of Johannesburg. Mr. Mandela did not name Chief

Buthelezi, but cited calls from leaders in the Natal region to resist the April 26-28 vote. "One of them has gone so far as to say he does not want to lie and to promise the people of Natal that there will be no bloodshed in the course of their campaign to disrupt the election, Mr. Mandela said at a news conference."

Chief Buthelezi told a rally of his followers last weekend that his call for an election boycott could lead to violence.

Natal is considered an Inkatha stronghold, and much of the political violence there has been between supporters of the ANC and Inthey had no clues to the identities of the killers, but ANC officials were quick to lay hlame. In a statement Sunday, Chief Buthelezi said, "I condemn this carnage in the strongest possible terms, not only because of the tragic loss of life of young people, but because such acts of violence can only further polarize our society."

Political violence is expected to increase as South Africa prepares for the vote: Inkatha, fearing ANC dominance in a post-apartheid South Africa, opposes the election, and its leaders have called for members to resist it peacefully.

mentariness. This is by no means a bad thing. Sections of the densest theoretical analysis are followed by shimmering gossip. One moment you are laved by the liquid character of Keynes: "He had every reason to be colossally self-confident, and so he was. The only obvious areas of mistrust had to do with his physical appearance and his speaking voice. His eyes were notous, his lips lasciv-ious; his aspect somewhat irregular. He did his best to turn himself into a normal-looking member of the Establishment, with military mous-tache, and City suits which he wore even in the country."

Are the theoretical sections incomprehensible to the uninitiated? Whether they are or not, Skidelsky has a gift for describing the terrain before he wades in. "The basic idea is that, following a simmp in output, the economy is likely to oscillate round a low level indefinitely unless 'something is done' to improve investment prospects." That is the essence of the Keynesian revolution. Economies were not self-regulating, as classical theory had held. Something had to be done.

Applying Lessons of Sarajevo Will Threats Plus Diplomacy Work Elsewhere?

By William E. Schmidt New York Times Service

ZAGREB, Croatia - As Bosnian Serbs began to give up their siege of Sarajevo last week after 22 months, pulling back gms and tanks under threat of NATO air strikes, officials at the United Nations headquarters here wondered if they had found at last the right balance of menace and diplomacy to break Bosnia's brutal cycle of bloodshed and violence.

Sir Michael Rose, the British general who commands United Nations peacekeeping troops in Bosnia-Herzegovina, went so far as to say that the operation in Sarajevo could be a model employed in other parts of the country, as long as more UN peacekeepers are dis-patched to his command.

"The logic that has been applied here and the processes that have been agreed by the two elements. involved are certainly applicable elsewhere," declared General Rose.

He did not say where that might be, but there is no shortage of candidate sites, from Srebenica in eastern Bosnia, cut off by Bosnian Serbs, to the ancient Herzegovina city of Mostar. There, Bosnian Croats, backed by Croatian regulars, have enforced a brutal siege that in the first nine days of February alone killed 37 people.

Final Decision Rests With UN

MASTER OF INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT (M.I.M.)

The University of Maryland University College is offering a Master of International Management degree through its new campus located in the heart of Germany. The M.I.M. is part of a comprehensive university program at Schwäbisch Gmünd that also includes bachelors of arts and science degrees. This intensive one year residential graduate program is structured from the highly successful program offered at College Park, Maryland and Washington, D.C. The curriculum focuses on the practical applications of international management in a global environment.

A cohort group of 35 students will begin the five term graduate program on August 22, 1994 and will culminate its studies by working in teams that will develop business strategies for selected international corporations in Europe.

ADMISSION CRITERIA

Participants will be drawn from all regions of the world on a competitive basis. Successful applicants will have the following qualifications:

- A minimum of 2 years of business experience
- Fluency in English and proficiency in one other business language (TOEFL score above 600)* A Bachelors degree or equivalent (minimum 2.75 GPA on 4.0 Scale)
- Graduate Management Admissions Test (GMAT) or a Graduate Record Examination (GRE)

* Participants who score 550-600 are eligible for conditional acceptance, but must successfully complete an intensive two-month language program.

A Russian 'Contribution'

Relief for Sarajevo?

With luck, Bosnia's Serbs would have pulled out or yielded their siege guns around Sarajevo by the time the United Nations ultimatum came due Sunday night. That desirable result was perhaps more likely to happen after President Bill Clinton's renewal of his pledge on Saturday to send American planes in NATO on an enforcement mission if the Serbs do not fully comply. He is determined. and for good reason, to try to restore at least some part of the credibility that NATO and the United States with it have lost in their dithering over the 22-month-old Bosnia war.

Mr. Clinton gave Moscow credit for making a "very important contribution" with its initiative to dispatch Russian peacekeeping troops to Bosnia — under a UN flag. The action is immediately important in helping the Serbs decide to bow to the UN Sarajevo ultimatum. There remains for us an element of uncertainty and anxiety about this action, too. No one can be 100 percent certain where it will lead. Will Russia move into a more active role in the overall Bosnia government talks? The early signs are that Russia means to become a political advocate for the Serbs, while expecting the United States to speak more for the interests of the Muslim-led Bosnian government, as Washington has been doing. That would put Russia and America in a posture of competing and cooperating at the same time.

Abrupt Russian Move

Russia, after days of pouting over feeling shoved aside by NATO in Sarajevo, has dra-matically and unilaterally rewritten the script by cutting a deal with Bosnian Serbs and moving Russian troops into place around the besieged Bosnian capital. Taken by surprise, Washington had little immediate choice but to accept Moscow's fait accompli. But it must not back off from its own principles and policies merely to let Boris Yeltsin please Russian nationalists who want to shift Mos-cow's policy in the Balkans toward a more partisan and confrontational path.

Acting independently of America and other Western powers, Moscow worked out its own arrangement on Thursday with Bosnian Serb leaders. It provides for withdrawal of Serbian artillery from the Sarajevo area in exchange for the deployment of Russian troops there under a United Nations flag. Russia's abrupt move could work out well for everyone if it simply represents a face-saving way for the Serbs to pull back their big guns. Besides saving Saraje-van lives, that would spare NATO from having to follow through on a risky bombing cam-paign, and would ease the growing pressure on Moscow from Russian nationalists.

But, unsettlingly, Russia insists that its deal "negates" the Feb. 9 NATO ultimatum, which threatened air strikes unless Serbian artillery around Sarajevo was either pulled back or placed under UN control. Moscow also wants Sarajevo placed under direct UN administration. But that would wrongly erode the authority of the Bosnian government, effectively putting it out of business.

They call it "CBS Morning News," so it want things when they happen, and nighttime

The first question that is bound to arise is whether and how to translate a Sarajevo cease-fire, if it takes, into calm in the other, less publicized but still desperate conflicts going on elsewhere in Bosnia.

The second pressing question for the Unit-ed States is to define the terms of a political settlement in Bosnia that are meant to be served by American military action. This will require a difficult process of consultation between the United States and Bosnia's Muslims, the party most dependent and now, with Russia's arrival on the diplomatic scene, even more dependent on Washington.

On Saturday the president cited a long and useful list of American geopolitical and hu-manitarian "interests" that, he said, justify participation in Sarajevo air strikes. He did so speaking as a commander in chief who may be about to send American military men into combat. Yet those "interests" constitute no less compelling a reason for earlier American efforts to address the agony of Bosnia. In an answer to a question that he took after his morning talk, Mr. Clinton gave an incomplete explanation, saying that earlier there had been no "consensus" for military action. That leaves open, of course, the possibility that he could have done much more to create a consensus than he chose to do. For the moment, nonetheless, perhaps it is enough to hope that the end of the siege of Sarajevo is within sight.

— THE WASHINGTON POST.

Any Russian troops deployed around Sarajevo should be under unambiguous UN com-mand. The deadline on withdrawing or sur-rendering control over Serbian artillery still stands. And the West will not coerce the Bosnian government into peace arrangements that it reasonably resists.

Still unknown is where President Yeltsin has struck the balance between trying to head off Russian nationalists and actually accom-modating their demands. In the eyes of the nationalists, and probably of most Russians, the Bosnian Serbs are ethnic and religious brethren. Yet the Bosnian Serbs' leaders and their patrons in Belgrade are the declared political enemies of Russian reform and reformers like Mr. Yeltsin.

Is Mr. Yeltsin's dramatic gesture meant to protect the brotherly Serbs in their continued war of aggression against Bosnia, or to maneuver them into accepting a face-saving way out? The answer will be known only as events play out on the ground in the next few days. In the best case, a concerted push by the United States, Europe and Russia could help achieve a fair peace, which cannot be confined to Sarajevo but must encompass all of Bosnia. Such a peace would bring an end to attacks on civilians. It would leave the government side with a workable economic base and maritime access to the outside world. And it would provide territorial arrangements allowing the secure passage of people and goods between all government-controlled cities.

Saving Bosnia requires more than surrounding an isolated Sarajevo with Russian soldiers whose impartiality cannot be taken for granted — unless they are under direct United Nations command.

Trying a Strategy of Failure on Trade With Japan

WASHINGTON — The only good trade agreement with Japan is no trade agreement with Japan that is the sentiment held by a large chunk of the American electorate. Up to a point, President Bill Clinton and his tough-minded trade negotiator, Mickey Kantor, seem to feel the same way.

Despite the beating that they are taking in much of the American press their to-the-brink tactics, the president and his special trade repre-sentative may be playing a winning hand with Japan.

Their approach to a trade pact with Tokyo resembles Ronald Reagan's first-term approach to arms control ments with the Soviet Union. Mr. Reagan was not interested in warhead totals and throw weight.

in Soviet behavior. Without that change, he said repeatedly, arms control agreements were meaningless. Even when the turn came in U.S.-Soviet relations under Mikhail Gorbachev, Mr. Reagan kept repeating Trust but verify.

Arms control was as big a political liability in 1980 as trade agreements with Japan are today. Mr. Reagan could safely raise the negotiating bar beyond Moscow's ability to jump. Politically, no agreement with Moscow was better than a controversial agreement with Moscow.

Aided by luck, timing and Mr. Gorbachev, Mr. Reagan got the change in behavior. It is a good omen for Mr. Clinton and Mr. Kantor in their brinkmanship with Prime Minister Moninto Hosekawa. Tokyo's fragile coalition government has already responded to the openly declared "failure" of the Clinton-Hosokawa talks in Washington this month by promising to open Japanese markets more widely to foreign goods. At The Washington Post the other day, Mr. Kantor, speaking with al-most ideological fervor, challenged a reporter who said that the administration's hard-nosedness puts Mr. Hosokawa's government in danger. Mr. Hosokawa's position on trade, not Mr. Clinton's, brought danger of collapse in Tokyo, Mr. Kantor said disingenuously.

What a change. A senior U.S. official admits that Washington will sit on the sidelines and let a Japanese government endanger itself.

during the week. For example, it showed Mr. Jansen Monday morning when he slipped on the final turn and added another grim notch Mr. Kantor argued that Japan is now mature enough to face strong U.S. pressure and respond. quences of policies that make Japan more independent and assertive on the world scene.

The conversation at The Post was largely a dialogue of the deal, with reporters challenging Mr. Kantor on details of Japanese-U.S. trade and Mr. Kantor responding that the real problem was the long-term pattern of behavior of the Japanese. He clearly suggested that Tokyo is cheating on the "great majority" of 33 existing U.S.-Japanese trade agreements. Why, he implied, sign another one unless it is ironelad and in America's favor?

This was Mr. Reasan talking about the Soviets, circa 1984, Mr. Kantor his philosophy with the Japanese is "Trust but quantify." He insisted that there has to be a "speedometer" in the form of a "framework agreement" to measure progress in reducing Japan's massive trade surplus with the world. Between his lines, I heard from Mr.

Instead of accepting Mr. Hosokawa's political weakness as a reason not to push on trade, Clinton & Co. see it as an opportunity to force Mr. Hosowaka to rem in Japan's pow-erful bureaucracy and change its re-strictive behavior on trade. This White House feels that it has little to lose politically in pursuing what I would call "a strategy of failure" on trade with Japan. Mr. Clinton and his chief of staff, Thomas McLarty, have been deeply influenced by the polling and analysis of Daniel Yankelovich, president of the Public Agenda Foundation, who the American-Japanese relationship is zero-sum, with Japan the winner and the United States the loser ... The only vision of future American-Japanese relations acceptable to the public is one that creates a new pattern of competition and cooperation."

Polls during the campaign showed that Americans in large numbers believe that the United States always loses in signing trade agreements with foreign countries, irrespective of acmal results. Changing that perception is one of government's major tasks. That is in part what Mr. Clinton and Mr. Kantor are embarked upon in the confrontation with Japan. They take clear risks. Mr. Hosokawa could fall. U.S. consumer demand for Japanese products and the deflationary impact of Japanese imports rob America of leverage if a real trade war erupts. Japan may come up with a deal that ultimately looks good but does little to reduce Tokyo's trade surpleses.

But President Clinton has a shot at a major triumph if things break his way. He is out to change U.S.-Japa-nese psychology as much as statistics. And even if there is no agreement, having squeezed Japan without pro-voking disaster would serve him well at the polls in 1996.

The West Should Back Values, Not Personalities

Other Comment Russia's Entry Is Welcome

The larger objective should be a partition ement for the whole country that permits a viable Muslim state with access to the sea. Strictly European efforts to bring this about have been unavailing. It will take old-fashioned, arm's-length cooperation between the United States and Russia to achieve a real peace and to keep turnoil from spreading in the Balkans. That should be the lesson Washington learns from Moscow's dramatic entry into the Bosnian crisis. Russia's intervention was welcome and helpful.

- The Baltimore Sun.

P ARIS — The handling of the Sa-rajevo bombing ultimatum by the United States and the other Western powers has reflected two fallacies in the Western approach to Russia and the ex-Communist world since 1989. Those two fallacies might be called the Affective and the Omniscient.

The first causes the West to identify its interests with individual Russian leaders, according to the latters' will-ingness to follow current Western ideas of how Russia should reform itself. This then leads the West to shape its policies on other matters such as how to deal with Serbia — according to how this is perceived as affecting the fortunes of those leaders.

in dealing with Yugoslavia, the Western governments have repeatedly been constrained in what they did by concern for what their action might do to Boris Yeltsin's domestic political standing, possibly promot-ing his nationalist rivals and feeding pan-Slavic tendencies. The objective realities of the international situation in which Russia and the other ex-Communist countries find themselves, and of the international structure in which they have to construct their future, has been neglected.

ern Omniscience. We believe we alone understand world problems. The ideas currently in fashion in Western circles are presented as truths of general validity and application. Other countries not only should adopt them but will be constrained by reality to do so. Never mind that our ideas change from one decade to the next.

The second fallacy is that of West-

This fallacy unhappily provides the orienting principle of the Clinton administration's foreign policy, as this has been described by the administration's National Security Council director ar 1 y the State Department's polic, spokespeople,

By William Pfaff

They say that Western-style democracy and market economics are prevailing everywhere in the world be-cause of their self-evident truth and efficacy: American policy need merely attach itself to this general trend in order to emerge, in a better world, as the triumphant sponsor of the values that have made this new world. This is a kind of ersatz dialectical materialism, a naive and sentimental imitation of Marx's belief in the "inevitable" march of history toward universal communism. Events in Russia, and in Eastern Europe and the Balkans, have, of course, demonstrated no such inevitable movement toward liberal society.

Quite the contrary. The reform leaders of the ex-Communist world need a firm and civilized structure of international security in their region, one that rewards respect for peaceful and democratic standards of conduct and provides punishments for not observing those standards.

That supposedly is what NATO was to offer Eastern Europe, together with the eastward extension of the European Union and other European institutions, and the incorporation of Russia into the economic as well as political institutions of international cooperation. But little of this has happened.

The leaders and people of the region need evidence that a structure of political values is at the foundation of the prosperity, and political and so-cial success, of Western Europe, the United States and the other democracies, and that this structure is one to which they can attach themselves, to enjoy its benefits and its security. They need to see democratic values firmly and predictably defended by the West. Only that can convente them not only that these are worthwhile values but that they will win out. Exactly the opposite has been demonstrated in the Yugoslav case. They have to be persuaded that more is to be gained by joining this system than by an anarchical pursuit of national or ethnic advantage and individual national aggrandizement. Serbia's successful aggression has been teaching the latter lesson. And Serbia's standard of conduct risks becoming the norm, not only for the countries of Eastern Europe and the ex-U.S.S.R., but even for some governments in or on the fringes of NATO and the European Union, which perceive the security and political gains of the past half-century being lost and the West's authority undermined by its acquiescence in aggression, and aggression's gains. Order will be re-established today, if it is re-established, not by intervention in the internal political and reform processes of Russia and the other ex-Communist countries, or by personal persuasion or personal di plomacy, but by creating or strengthening international institutions that provide order, predictability, security and the defense of democratic value This is the only thing that can help now in Yugoslavia. It is what Russia needs, together with the other former member nations of the U.S.S.R., and also Hungary, with its external minorities, and Romania and Slovakia, and Greece and Macedonia, and others.

Unless a climate of international security and peaceful political con-duct is re-established in Fastern and Southeastern Europe, things could become much worse than they are now. It is necessary for the United States and the European democracies to defend their own values. If they don't, they could lose them. International Herald Tribune.

1894: Lynch Mob Kills

NEW YORK — A disgraceful lynching took place near Birmingham, Ala-bama, yesterday [Feb. 18]. On Saturday night a negro assaulted a white woman, injuring her so severely that she died. Soon after that outrage a posse of armed men came upon two negroes who took flight. This was taken as evidence of guilt. The lynching party concluded that one of the men was the assassin, but could not decide which. "Let's bang them both and make sure of it!" someone shouted. The suggestion received general approval and the two men were aged to a branch of a tree. It has since transpired that the two were lawabiding and of excellent character.

In any event, it was the shatterng of another myth about the Jap-Mese consumer. Who said the Japinese would never eat foreign rice? With the United States and Jaoan on the brink of a trade war, one nuestion is this: On whose side are he Japanese consumers?

Are they clamoring for imported products, which would make them a natural ally of the United States? Or do they have a predisposition to buy Japanese, representing just another hard-to penetrate layer of Ja-

SEOUL - Almost a week after agreeing to accept international nuclear inspections. North Korea is still keeping the news a secret from its people. Nevertheless, South Korean officizls say the North probably will stick to its agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency on nuclear inspections.

North Korean press organizations have yet to report on the country's announcement Wednesday that it would allow the Viennabased atomic agency, a UN nuclear watchdog to inspect its seven de-clared nuclear facilities.

Adding to concern, as of Sunday the Pyongyang government had yet to issue visas for the agency inspectors, South Korea's Youhap newsagency said in a dispatch from Vi-surmount various trade barriers. Japan tends to argue that the market is open and that if foreign products do not sell well, it is because vendors are not doing enough to meet the exacting standards of Japanese consumers.

Perhaps the Japanese have a parative shopper.

True, Japanese consumers have not poured out in support of recent U.S. demands for greater access to Japan's automobile, telecommunications or insurance markets.

But that is because an organized consumer movement barely exists in Japan, and the consumer groups that do exist often seem to be close-ly aligned with certain businesses. Many consumer groups, for in-stance, opposed the opening of Japan's rice market with the argu-ment that foreign rice would be tainted by chemicals. A few years ago, such groups also joined with small shopkeepers to oppose easing restrictions on large stores like Toys R' Us, even though these large stores usually offer lower prices than Japan's mom-and-pop

But if consumers don't speak with their vaices, they do with their wallefs. And many foreign products, from Levi's jeans to Anstralian beef and French skis, are being snapped up.

German Rights Groups Move to Stop Benetton

BONN — German human-rights groups took legal action on Sunday, against the Italian clothing company Benetica for using a picture of the blood-drenched clothes of a soldier killed in Bosnia as a fashion advertisement.

The groups, the Society for Threatened People and the Center for Exposing War Crimes, said they had asked the federal prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe to investigate whether Benetton violated international law by exploiting the Bosnian war. > If there is any reason for the failure of more products to sell in Japan, he said, it is that the distribution system can block foreign cts or raise their prices excessively. Indeed, others say, being foreign, especially for luxury prod-ucts, is a plus.

Foreign products are becoming even more acceptable because of the rise of the yen, which makes imports less expensive. The latest issue of Nikkei Trendy, a magazine about consumer life styles, features a 40-page cover story on the rush of imports under the theme "Beat the Japanese Market."

The recession is also helping shatter other myths about Japanese consumers. A few years ago, for instance, it was the gospel that Japanese consumers cared only about quality and service, not price. Lowering a price often made the product less attractive.

Take the Big Mac. McDonald's high-priced department stores. with their legions of obsequious sales clerks, in favor of discount stores, which are spreading. Mail order is also on the rise.

Still, Japanese consumers are far from identical to American or European consumers, particularly in their emphasis on quality.

It is not enough in Japan for a product to work. It must be perfect down to the paint job and packag-ing. This is a country, after all, in which farmers hang weights on budding cucumbers so that they will grow straight instead of

Governments vs. Joblessness: EU Will Keep Score

By Tom Buerkle

and Alan Friedman International Herald Tribune

BRUSSELS — Fearing that its prescription for fighting Europe's employment crisis could die a quiet death, the European Commission plans to devise a scorecard to show how well each European Union member nation is following its recommendations. ion officials said in interviews.

The 12 nations' scores will relate to policies advo-cated in the white paper on growth, competitiveness particularly for the one-half of Europe's jobless people and employment that was approved by European who have been without work for more than a year, attempt to give the process real impetus. There is a risk leaders in December. They will be contained in a report to the EU summit meeting on the Greek island of Corfu on June 24 and 25.

The commission has no power to compel member governments to act on the white paper, so its only weapon is moral suasion. It will use its scorecard to analyze the countries' performance on key recommendations such as reducing social security charges, espe-cially for low-paid workers, deregulating labor mar-

The report will be compiled by aides to Jacques Delors, the commission's president, Henning Christophersen, economics commissioner, and Padraig Flynn. employment and social affairs commissioner.

Mr. Flynn, 53, an energetic former politician from Ireland, last week began a tour of European capitals to discuss jobs and other issues addressed in the White Paper. He said in an interview that the findings would be presented "in a table on who is doing what, on who is following the white paper."

A commission official was more blunt: "This is an

that this thing could just die."

While Mr. Flynn was reluctant to describe his tour and the report as an attempt to pressure European leaders, he is clearly embarked on on an aggressive campaign to convert Europe's words into action and get the white paper implemented.

"It will make no impact unless they act on it." Mr. Flynn said. "If they decide not to do it, they will be in contradiction of their own request." His message is that national governments, not the See JOBS, Page 11

Asia Airlines Brace for Showdowns PAL Investor Ready to Sell Bloc Vows to Resist Inroads

MANILA — A major shareholder in Philippine Airlines is attempting to sell his stake in the financially troubled carrier, executives and news reports indicated Sunday.

Lucio Tan, a Filipino-Chinese tycoon who controls 51 percent of P. R. Holdings Inc. — which in turn owns 67 percent of the airline — is searching for a buyer because he is unhappy with the status of his 5.1 billion peso ($185 million) investment in PAL, an aide said. The side added that the sultan of Brunei, a Malaysian group and another Filipino-Chinese investor were among those being approached as potential buyers.

The Philippine Daily Inquirer of Manila said Mr. Tan was offering his stake at "acquisition cost, no interest, no premium" to Sultan Muda Hassanal Bolkiah of Brunei. The shift came a day after P. R. Holdings called for a revamp of the fing carrier to reverse its declining profits and demanded the appointment of a new president and a new auditor for the airline. Separately, the PAL president and chairman, Carlos Dominguez said the arrime had a net income of 56.9 million pesos for the nine-month period that ended in December, but would have earned 641 million pesos if not for heavy costs caused by planes grounded for safety checks and by write-offs for unserviceable parts.

A statement by the PAL board after an emergency meeting Saturday did not specify if Mr. Dominguez would remain president. The sale of Mr. Tan's stake, if completed, would give the new owner an equivalent 33 percent direct ownership in PAL. But direct control can be exercised only if P. R. Holdings is dissolved and PAL.

International Herald Tribune SINGAPORE - Asia-Pacific countries will form a united front and restrict access to U.S. and European airlines if the United States and the European Union try to "pick off individual Asian countries one by one" in bilateral negotiations on air traffic rights, the head of cheong Choong Kong, chairman of the Orient Airlines Association, said members of the group were worried that the United States and the European Union, which are both developing new external aviation policies, would use their negotiating strength to maximize the access of their airlines to the fast-growing Asia-Pacific area while applying curbs on entry into their own aviation markets.

Mr. Cheong, who also is managing director of Singapore Airlines Ltd., was opening an international aviation conference. The two-day meeting is to end on Monday.

While many Asian airlines are expanding and profitable, most European and U.S. carriers are struggling to shake off heavy overcapacity and accumulated losses.

An expert committee recently proposed that the EU establish a common external aviation policy before June 1995 to match its liberalized internal policy.

Dominique Pavard, head of the policy coordination unit of the European Commission's transport directorate, said Sunday that the aim was to "achieve a market-oriented aviation trading regime." She said this would send a clear signal to non-European states and air carriers that the European Union's policy would be consistent and

Mercedes Kicking Tires on Swatch Car

FRANKFURT - When the Mercedes-Benz chairman, Hehmit Werner, arrived at the Gene-va auto show last March, the Swatch on his wrist generated at least as much attention as the huxury cars he was sent to promote.

Mirror Group Raises Bid Price For Independent

LONDON — A consortium led by Mirror Group Newspapers PLC said Sunday that it had raised its offer for Newspaper Publishing PLC to 350 pence (55.17) per share from 261.6 pence. The offer matched the price per share oaid earlier this month when Tony O'Reilly's Irish newspaper chain, Independent Newspapers PLC, bought a 24.99 percent stake. It values Newspaper Publishing at £73.65 million.

The owners of Newspaper Publishing, which owns The Independent and The Independent on Sunday, said the Mirror Group's initial bid had not been high enough.

That offer included cash and new common Mirror shares; it also proposed a full-cash alternative at 250 pence per common share.

The Mirror Group consortium includes Promotora de Informaciones SA, publisher of Spain's El Pais newspaper; Espresso Interna-tional Holding SA, which publishes Italy's La Repubblica newspaper; and Newspaper Publishing's founders, including the editor of The Independent, Andreas Whit-

The consortium already owns a 47.08 percent stake in Newspaper came the same day the Mirror Group bid £29.1 million for a 52.92 percent stake in the company. Carlo Caracciolo, the chairman of Espresso, said the Mirror Group consortium was "convinced that the future of The Independent and The Independent on Sunday will be best secured through an association with a strong U.K. newspaper group and believes that MGN offers the greatest benefits in this regard."

He added, "We trust that this offer will now by recommended by the independent directors of Newspaper publishing with a view to ending as soon as possible the present damaging uncertainty about the company's future."

The Sunday Times said the Newspaper Publishing chairman, Ian Hay Davison, would not recommend the offer. The newspaper did not cite any sources in its report.

On Friday, the Department of Trade and Industry said it had received an application from the Mirror Group partnership for consent to acquire Newspaper Publishing. The group has been considering raising its bid since early this month.

Michael Heseltine, the trade and industry secretary, told British lawmakers at the end of last week that Mr. O'Reilly's 24.99 percent stake in Newspaper Publishing, which cost him £18.4 million on the open market, makes him the biggest single shareholder. His move

It's Top Trouble II At European Bank

The surprise announcement last week that the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development will soon lose the head of one of its two banking regions has reopened some old wounds at the London-based bank set up three stormy years ago to spur economic growth in Eastern Europe.

Will Mario Sarcinelli, who departs the EBRD to bead Italy's Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, be replaced by someone from inside, from outside, or perhaps by no one at all?

"From a pure organizational point of view it probably makes sense to have just one man heading banking," said a member of the board of directors. "But the politics in a place like this makes these decisions complicated." Indeed it does. If Mr. Sarcinelli were not to be replaced, the theory is that Ron Freeman, who now heads banking operations for the northern zone of countries served by the EBRD would take over the running of the southern zone that has been led by Mr. Sarcinelli. That would at last put the operations side of the bank under one leader, a move that has been much debated but never implemented. In November, the bank's new president, Jacques de Larosière, swept aside the old, much-maligned organization that had split the bank between one arm lending to the private sector and one lending to the public sector. In its wake he put two regional divisions, each empowered to look after the private and public sectors in their areas. "At the time of the reorganization some wondered whether having a consulation with two men in charge of the banking system made a lot of sense in the long run," said John Coleman, Canada's represen-

Mr. Sarcinelli's departure now brings the old dream of a unified command structure back within reach. On the other hand, bank insiders point out that Mr. Freeman has one major strike against him: He is an American in an institution that the bank's European directors see as primarily a creature of their own will.

Whatever the outcome of the struggle to replace Mr. Sarcinelli, bank insiders say that one of the biggest problems facing management is staff morale. Bankers active in Eastern Europe report a recent flood of job applications written on EBRD stationery.

Are Economists Doomed to a Fatal Curve?

Like any financial center worth its salt, London is awash in is. Their daily prognostications have long been vital parts of the process by which governments as well as markets navigate.

Too bad, says Paul Ormerod. In a book due out next month called "The Death of Economics," Mr. Ormerod, an economist himself, heaps soom on his fellow practitioners and on the state of the "dismal science" itself.

"Economics is really like science before Newton," he insists. "A things will stand the test of time but the rest is meaningless." Mr. Ornerod cites a littany of economists' misdeeds. He notes a recent study by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development which concluded that its seven member governments' own economists would have come closer to the truth over the last five years if they had simply forecast that growth and inflation rates for the next year would be the same as they were the previous year.

His prescriptions? For starters, that his colleagues pay more attention to cultural and historical factors and less to mathematical models.

Squint Not: The Sunglasses Are Coming!

In the land where the winter sun rises as late as 8 A.M., huge the horizon for the course of the day, slips away again at 4 P.M. and is rarely visible through the clouds anyhow, few people can even remember where they put their sunglasses — if indeed they own any. Into this inhospitable climate has strode a most unlikely retailer; Sangless Hut, the Miami-based company that bills itself as the world's largest seller of sunglasses.

Last June, it opened an outlet at Heathsow Airport, sensibly in the departure founge. Now, however, it is daringly moving away from the airport beachhead and into the darkest heart of Britain in preparation for an assault later this year on the European Contine Jack Chadsoy, Smiglass Hint's president, said: "We figured if we could self singlasses in the U.K. we could self them anywhere."

Mr. Greenspan is expected to face some criticism and tough questioning from a louse of Representatives subcommittee on banking when he presents his annual review of the Fed's interest-rate policy.

The central bank raised short-term interest rates Feb. 4, for the first time in five years, to try to convince traders and investors that its vigilance against inflation was beyond reproof, some analysts said.

NEW YORK - Treasury bond traders that, rather than reassuring traders and in-

U.S. CREDIT MARKETS

The markets seem to have increased their focus on inflation in the expectation that the Fed will have to raise short-term rates again soon. This has led to a sell-off in the bond market and a jump in interest rates.

"The interest-rate hike validated the market's inflation fears," Matthew F. Alexy, a decline was part of a "global financial-assets government securities specialist at CS First re-evaluation." He added: "All the markets Boston, said. "The market must have asked itself: Why would the Fed move to raise out of that trade right now."

But in the two weeks since then, it appears interest rates unless there was, in fact, a problem with inflation?"

> The bond market, which like other U.S. markets will be closed Monday for the Presidents' Day holiday, tumbled last week, with the 30-year Treasury bond ending at 95 4/32, down 2 26/32 points on the week, as the yield soared to 6.63 percent from 6.41 percent.

> The yield is now a third of a percentage point higher than it was immediately before the Fed pushed short-term interest rates up a quarter of a point, to 3.25 percent.

Over the past five years, he said, investors have come to believe that "you can always buy a dip." But room for doing that is running out, he said: "Look at the five-year note. Another 50 basis points in fives and you've undone the entire last year's trading." The U.S. Treasury is to sell $24.4 billion of three-month and six-month bills in its weekly auction Tuesday, followed by $17.0 billion of two-year notes Wednesday and $11.0 billion of five-year notes Thursday. Traders said they would wait until after Mr. Greenspan's testimony to decide how to handle the supply of bonds in the market.

"It's not a lot of supply," a trader said. "It's just enough to give the market a little bit of tribulation."

Debt Sale And IPO For Smurfit

ST. LOUIS - Jefferson Smurfit Corp., reacting to what it said were much improved market conditions, plans to sell $1 billion of equity and debt to the public as part of a $2.5 billion recapitalization.

The transaction is part of a plan to reduce the paper and packaging company's debt load resulting from a leveraged buyout in 1989 by Jefferson Smurfit Group PLC, an Irish concern that owns 50 percent of Jefferson Smurfit Corp., and Morgan Stanley Group Inc.

Jefferson Smurfit Corp. said it planned to raise about $400 million by selling as many as 16.8 million shares in an initial public offering. Jefferson Smurfit Corp., with ales of $3 billion in 1992, is one of the largest American makers of paperboard and packaging materials. A collapse in the price of linerboard after it was taken private in 1989 hurt the company's ability to structure operations.

After falling to about $295 a ton in 1993 from $410 a ton in 1989, linerboard prices are expected to improve this year as the U.S. economy improves.

Jefferson Smurfit Corp.'s chief financial officer, John R. Funke, said the company planned to sell equity, which may be offered for about $20 a share, because of recent improvement in the value of paperboard stocks.

"The market is right for the pa-per cyclicals," he said. A subsidiary of Jefferson Smur-

Fed Chief Disputes Bank Plan

ORLANDO, Florida - The Federal Reserve Board chairman, Alan Greenspan, criticized on Saturday a plan to create a single U.S. bank regulator, saying it would irreparably harm the Fed by turning it into an out-of-touch "ivory tower."

Any savings from such a move would prove fleeting and would hurt economic growth, as well as weaken the U.S. central bank's powers to oversee the economy. Mr Greenspan told a meeting here of the Independent Bankers Association of America.

In November, the Treasury Department unveiled a proposal to merge the regulatory duties of the four existing bank agencies into one Federal Banking Commission, a plan that must be approved by Congress. Officials say it would promote economic growth and save up to $200 million a year by cutting duplicate regulation among agencies.

The Fed's role in regulating banks would be reduced, but it would still fit Group plans to buy $100 million oversee monetary policy that moves short-term interest rates. Mr. Green-of common shares in addition to span argued that a single regulator who lacks responsibility to oversee the those sold in the public offering.

Seoul Spells Out '94 Sell-Off At a Glance

SEOUL - The government unveiled on Saturday a major privatization program under which it will sell $2.5 billion of stock in dozens of wholly or partially owned companies this year.

Analysts said that most of the 47 companies had semi-monopoly status, making them especially attractive to investors.

Under the plan, $8.6 billion of state shares in the 47 companies and 10 others are to be sold to the private sector through the stock market or open bidding by 1998. Sixteen other state-controlled companies would be subjected to mergers or the readjustment of State-owned concerns affected include Citizens National Bank, Korea Housing Bank, Korea Heavy Industries & Construction, Korea Tobacco & Ginseng Corp., Korea Fertilizer and National

The government also will sell stock it holds in Korea Exchange Bank, Daewoo Shipbuilding, Kia Specialty Steel, Asiana Airlines, Lucky Metals, Dongbu Chemical and Samsung General Chemical.

Marietta Demands Part of U.S. Savings On Dynamics Deal

By Andrea Adelson

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Martin Mariet ta Corp, has said it might abandon its proposed acquisition of the space systems division of General Dynamics Corp. unless the Pentagon gives the company a share of the savings it expects the transac-

The $208.5 million transaction with General Dynamics, agreed to in December, needs the approval of the Federal Trade Commission, which is not expected before April. In the meantime, Martin Marietta is seeking what could be a precedeat-setting concession from the Defense Department, to give it a share of the cost savings, estimated at $450 million, to be realized by consolidating the two companies' space-launching operations.

The opportunity to share in the savings is important to making this deal financially viable," Phillip S. Giaramita, a spokesman for the defense-contracting and aerospace company, said Friday.

If the transaction is aborted, Martin Marietta will have to pay General Dynamics a $10 million penalty.

"We haven't determined what we're going to do yet," Glenn Flood, a Pentagon spokesman, said of the Martin Marietta request. Undersecretary of Defense John M. Deutch, who is negotiating with Martin Mar- be moved to San Diego.

ietta on the transaction, was not available for comment. But Daniel W. Smith, director of the arms transfer project at the Center for Defense information, a military research organization, said the Pentagon might well agree to Martin Marietta's terms.

He noted that William J. Perry, before he became secretary of defense, advocated helping out crucial military suppliers whose viability was threatened by Pentagon spending cuts. For example, the Navy will buy a third Seawolf submarine for $2.3 billion to avoid closing General Dynamics' Electric Boat production line, because reopening it, if that became necessary, would cost more. "Martin is playing off that," Mr. Smith said. "What Martin is doing through the back door is asking for a government subsidy." Martin Marietta contends that the space-launching business is particularly risky because of intense competition from companies in other countries that typically are Among Martin Marietta's consolidation choices are transferring to Denver General Dynamics' Atlas rocket building business, which has 2,400 employees in San Diego. It is also possible that Martin Marietta's 5,500 employee astronautics division, which builds heavy-payload Titan rockets in Denver, could down 5.1 points, or 2 percent, for the week.

Profit-taking last week overcame limited sup-port from a German interest-rate easing. The CBS all-share index closed at 288.30 points.

Royal Dutch and Unilever were among the hig losers. Royal Dutch lost over 3 percent, falling to 208.70 guilders. Unilever's close was 225 guilders, down from 230.60 guilders. With a ! billion guilder stock issue imminent, KLM fell almost 5 percent, to 50.70 guilders.

Frankfurt

The market managed a respectable gain last week, helped by the Bundesbank's half-point reduction of its discount rate, to 5.25 percent, on Thursday.

The DAX index finished the week at 2,151.97 points, up 61.36 points, or 3 percent.

Analysts said the market was encouraged by the discount rate count, even though the Lombard was left unchanged, because it meant the central bank was likely to lower its securities repurchase rate over the next few weeks. All three rates are charged on collateralized loans to banks, with the limited amount of funds for German money-market rates and the emergency Lombard rate the ceiling. The repo rate is used to guide interest rates between the two. Among financial issues, Deutsche Bank gained 35 Deutsche marks for the week to end at 835.50; Dresdner Bank rose 24 to 428; Commerzbank, 98.50 to 359.50; and Bayerische Ver-

Hong Kong share prices tumbled last week, with the market pressured by fears of rising interest rates.

The Hang Seng Index dived 678.15 points, or 6 percent, to close at 10,825.88 on Friday. Brokers said most investors were awaiting the Hong Kong Bank Association's decision Prices crept higher last week as the market was caught between hopes for interest-rate cuts and worries about poor economic indicators. The Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index edged up 3.7 points, to 3,382.6.

Dealers hoped a series of poor economic indi-cators, including a 0.5 percent fall in industrial production in December, a surprise rise in unernployment in January and a weak rise in banking credits would force Chancellor of the Exchequer Kenneth Clarke to reduce interest rates. Shares fell on Friday, however, following weakness on Wall Street and the publication of a study by Nomura Research Institute revising downwards its forecasts for the Financial Times 100 index, seen as ending the year at 3,500 points and not 4,000.

Among companies announcing earnings, Glaxo gained 40 peace to 679 after a 22 percent rise in half-year profits.

British Airways fell 3 pence to 472 despite The Bundesbank's rate cut, seen as largely symbolic since the reduction did not extend to the more important Lombard and repo rates, failed to convince investors of an important, long-term trend.

Singapore

The Straits Times Industrials index fell 7.33 points, to 2.334.27, as U.S.-Japanese trade tensions pushed investors to the sidelines. Fraser Neave fell 4 percent, to 18.50, while Incheape lost 3 percent, to 5.75. Singapore Land dropped 14 percent, to 6.90.

Tokyo

Prospects for a rising yen after U.S.-Japanese trade talks failed last week sent the 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average down 1,031.10 points, or 5 percent, to 18,959.60. The broader Tokyo Stock Price Index feil 3 percent, to 1,557.11 points. Sony feil 260 yen to 6,030 yen and Toshiba 28 to 718 yen. Toyota was down 30 yen at 1,870 yen and Nissan down 12 at 826 yen. Financials also declined, with Nomura Securities down 60 yen at 2.190 yen and Fuji Bank down 90 at 2.250 yen.

Zurich

The market rose last week, despite nervousness over European interest rate trends. The Swiss Performance Index edged up I percent or 26.42 points to 1.925.56 from last week's

1.899.14. Switzerland's failure to follow the Bundesbank's example of cutting its discount rates in Germany disappointed the market and foreign investors withdrew to the sidelines. SBS was one of the bigger winners after announcing impressive profit figures for last year, rising 29 Swiss francs to 1,455. UBS also rose by 35 to 1,455.

Severnoye Siyaniye is based in St. Petersburg and has 1,000 employees.

Iran Buys 5 South Korean Tankers

TEHRAN (Reuters) — Iran has placed a $490 million order for five oil tankers with a South Korean company and is negotiating for 16 more, an official was quoted on Sunday as saying.

The newspaper Hamshahri quoted the general director of National Iranian Tanker Co., Mohammad Souri, as saying the South Korean company, which another official identified as Daewoo Corp., would provide the financing as a loan. The five tankers have a combined capacity of 1.5 million metric tons.

Electrolux to Acquire Unit of AEG

BONN (Reuters) — Electrolux AB of Sweden will pay about 960 million Deutsche marks ($558 million) to acquire AEG Hausgeräte AG, the domestic-appliances unit of AEG AG, the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung newspaper said. Leatung newspaper said.

The newspaper quoted Carihans Damm, chairman of the AEG unit's management board, as saying that the acquisition would take effect July 1, subject to antitrust clearance. AEG is a unit of Daimler-Benz AG.

Iberia's Argentina Stake to Be Raised

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina plans to transfer 28 percent of the stock of the formerly state-owned airline Aerolineas Argentinas to the Spanish carrier Iberia, President Carlos Menem said. The Argentinian government still owns 43 percent of the carrier. Iberia owns 30 percent and has operated the airline since late 1990. Mr. Menem did not explain how the transfer of shares would be carried out.

Whitbread Resumes

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — Tokio, the joint New Zealand-Japanese entry skippered by Chris Dickson, led the 4-yacht fleet out of Waitemata Harbor on Sunday at the start of the fourth leg of the Whit-bread Round the World race.

Eight boats in the fleet umped the gun and six — Winston, Yamaha, Galicia 93 Pescanova, Dolphin and Youth, Intrum Justitia and Merit Cup—had to tack back after being recalled by the starter. Two other yachts, Brooksfield and Heineken, declined to restart and are likely to face a penalty.

Tokio, the leading yacht in the Whitbread-60 class and the overall race leader, made a conservative start that paid dividends. Dickson took Tokio past the first mark on the 5,914-nautical mile journey to Punta del Este, Uruguay, in 38 minutes, 47 seconds.

by weekends in recent memory.

Wales's sturning 24-15 home victory over France and the even more unexpected 13-12 victory by the Irish at Twickenham, unbit of since 1982, left only the Weish with a chance of completing the Grand Slam. The revitalized Welsh team, which finished at the bottom of the standings last year, needs a victory in its final game at Twick-enliam on March P to complete its first clean sweep since 1978.

The Weish pack, based around Scott Quinnell, gave its most compelling performance for years against the startled French. A try by Quinnell after 15 minutes helped to give the home team an 11-3 lead at half-time and although the French fought back to 17-15 they could not break the Welsh ance.

Swiss Veteran Takes Bobsled Title 2d Time

New York Times Service

LILLEHAMMER — It was the secondclosest two-man bobsled finish in Olympics history, and Gustav Weder of Switzerland, who won the gold medal in the 1992 Olympics, won it again on Sunday.

He beat his teammate. Reto Götschi, the leader after Saturday's first two runs who was making his Olympic debut at the age of 28. After the last two runs were completed. Weder's time was 3 minutes, 30.81 seconds, just five-hundredths of a second ahead of Götschi. Weder's pusher, Donat Acklin. is the older brother of Guido Acklin. who pushes for Götschi.

Only the 1968 Games in Grenoble, France, had a tighter finish, when Eugenio Monti of Italy and Horst Floth of Germany finished in a dead heat, and Monti was declared the winner because he had the fast-

Gunther Huber and Stefano Ticci captured the bronze, Italy's first Olympic bobsled medal since 1972, three-tenths of a second behind Weder. Two of Huber's brothers. LILLEHAMMER - Officials laid on 23 more trains and brought in more traffic police Sunday as they continued trying to cope with far more speciators than expect-

With clear skies, the start of winter holidays in southern Norway and the country's gold medal haul having tempted thousands to attend the Games, crowds estimated at about 150,000 on Saturday caused traffic jams in Lillehammer, which is normally home to 23,700 people. John Dreyfuss and his wife Mary Noble Ours spent 16 years restoring this house in Georgetown: "For many, many years this house was thought to be incomprehensible."

Mind Over Matter: Saving a Grand House

By Cathy Horyn WASHINGTON — To a lot of people, the house at 3400 Prospect Street in Georgetown is an enigma. Its Palladian facade suggests a London apartment building, circa 1890, but from around the corner and across the Potomac, one can plainly see that the house on the hill is a perfect example of Georgian architecture. What this 18th-century jewel is doing in the middle of a 19th-century shell of brick and mortar is something that only John Dreyfuss would dare to understand

He was 28 years old when he came home from Yale University, a man as unprepared as any for the snares of fate. He had abandoned graduate school in architecture to become a sculptor, and to help his father, an architect and builder, with a property whose historical significance was all that stood in the way of its demise.

Although Halcyon House could claim a provenance equal to that of a James River plantation — it had belonged to Benjamin Stoddert, the first secretary of the U.S. Navy and a pallbearer at the funeral of George Washington — modern life had radically altered its appearance. Where once there had been rolling land down to masculine interiors," says Ours, who has the Potomac, there was now M Street, and spent months orchestrating wall colors; a view blighted by commercial rooftops.

Where once there had been a graceful Georgian house, there was now a massive addition whose facade seemed completely at odds with the rest of the property. By the time John Dreyfuss arrived, in 1978, the house had entered a state of glorious

"The only things holding the building together were the laws of inertia," he says. Drevfuss did not intend to take on a project that would occupy the next 16 years of his life. That he did is a measure not only of his courage but of his imagination. For what might have become a subdivision of row houses or a station on the Washington subway line, as his father and partners had once proposed, became instead one of the largest independent restorations in the city
— 30,000 square feet (2,800 square meters) of private living quarters, apartments and studio space. This month, Dreyfuss and his wife, Mary Noble Ours, will finally occupy Halcyon House

They are a couple whose diverging styles have come together on a grand scale. "Mary Noble sees everything like a picture," says Drevfuss, in reference to his wife's work as a portrait photographer. Those portraits, whether of children in her studio or of young riders at a county fair in her native West Virginia, possess a kind of warmth and dignity that is also reflected in the couple's surroundings. "We both like pretty spent months orchestrating wall colors; floor tiles (limestone to slate), and now must face the daunting task of furnishing a house with 12 fireplaces, a music room and a library. For the past six years the Dreyfusses have lived on the top floor of an adjacent town house. A few weeks ago, Ours brought some furniture over to the main house to see how it would look in the larger space. "It looked like doll furniture."

For Dreyfuss, the renovation has really been one of mind over matter. Once it became clear that preserving the house was the only way to ever make it salable, Dreyfuss came up with a bold, and controversial, plan to stabilize the one-and-aquarter-acre (a half hectare) property from further erosion down the hill. "You either see this as a problem or part of the design process," he says. So he proposed digging out the yard, and building a 9,000-square-foot underground chamber that would support the house as well as provide him with studio and office space. Although the city initially rejected the plan — it took Dreyfuss nearly five years to win approval - he believed that modern mechanics were not at odds with a house that had previously been stabilized by Albert Clemens's 19th-century addition. "For many, many years this house was thought to be incomprehensible," says Dreyfuss, "But I never thought it was odd. In fact, I think Clemens [a nephew of

By last summer, the terraced garden was completed, and the Dreyfusses were regu-larly entertaining friends with luncheons by the pool. In a noisy city, with planes flying down the Potomac toward National Airport, it was hard to imagine a more private urban retreat.

Of course, people are always asking Dreyfuss what all this cost, since no expense appears to have been spared. But he won't say. "Although money is always the important consideration," he says, "ultimately it is a test of will." Some of the maintenance costs will be borne by tenants (apartments were included in the Clemens' wing), and the Dreyfusses will probably lease the house to charitable groups for special func-tions. As for his own feelings about the project as it nears completion. Dreyfuss, at 44, is nothing if not pragmatic.

To be able to take on a house like this you must first be willing to give it up," he says. "You may not be able finish it. Or you may just finish it and never get to live in it. But whatever happens, you can never think about the end."

Someone back home would also love to hear the sound of your voice.

Dial direct from Norway with AT&T. Just dial 800-190-11.

After a day of cheering, shouting, oohing and ashing at the Olympic Winter Games, we know you'll want to share all the excitement with people back home. That's why we've made it so easy with AT&T.

Anywhere in Norway, simply dial 800-190-11. In other countries, dial the access number from the list on the right. An English-speaking AT&T Operator or voice prompt will help complete your call to the U.S. or more than 70 other countries. Use your AT&T Calling Card or call collect. You'll get economical AT&T rates and keep hotel surcharges to a minimum.

Of course, with AT&T you also know you'll get clear. crisp connections. So there's no need to raise your voice.
